From hits like Fortnite, Garena Free Fire or PlayerUnknown's Battlegrounds, the genre known as Battle Royale expanded very strongly in the field of games and applications. The phenomenon applies to both mobile phones and consoles and computers.

Although each delivery has its characteristics, it must be recognized that the proposal between them and the objectives to be met are quite similar. NetEase Games developed a free download game that is added to the catalog of this type of delivery but that comes to add news and game mechanics that have not been seen to date.

Cyber Hunter is a 2019 sci-fi video game in which you can participate in a battle of all against all. The game has versions for phones and computers.

The scenario in which the battle takes place is a world in the future where the excessive advance of technology generated a situation of chaos. Humans developed very important powers that will fill them with possibilities when it comes to fighting. For example, we will have the ability to build as we fight. Barriers are available to avoid shots, camouflages or devices that tell us where our enemies are.

But the great advantage of Cyber Hunter the player will find in the movement mechanics. It is in this section where NetEase Games' production makes a big difference compared to its competitors. When playing Cyber Hunter we will have the opportunity to enjoy a large map with an excellent elaboration. In it we will be able to play along but also at the top. Our characters have the ability to climb to very, very high heights to face other enemies. Not only that, but we also have the ability to fly hanging from a device or roll when moving to avoid bullets. All this great plasticity of movements gives our heroes a lot of freedom.

The terrain is so wide and offers so many possibilities for exploration that it even includes a gigantic waterfall that we can access. The novel Battle Royale is not only about shooting and finding weapons but also gives special attention to exploration and the ability of discovery that we have.

If you create a user on a mobile device, you can transfer that account to the desktop version. The advances you have obtained with that character can be transferred to the terminal you want to use.

You have the option to play alone or with people in duos or teams. There are also some trainings, tutorials on the menu and you have the option of training before going into battle. Within the title you have a lot of control over the graphics and sound settings. For the more competitive players, a world leaderboard is available.

We have two character options to choose from, which are Max or Zero, but Cyber Hunter presents one of the greatest possibilities for customizing figures in the entire market. We will have the opportunity to alter absolutely every detail of our player. From the hair color to the shape of the eyelids.

When you first start in the game, you have the character customization screen so that you can start with it and change some physical details. So you can model the visual colors of the eyes, hair, lips, etc. You cannot change the outfit at the beginning but you can do it as you progress and win games. You can find weapons in the game, it is up to you which one you will choose according to the style of attack and defense with which you feel most comfortable.

One of the advantages of Cyber Hunter is that everything works very well in the game: the controls, the automatic loot, everything feels good and fluid. You have the possibility to invite your friends to share the experience with you if you wish or to form teams with other users. Also, you can buy more skills and many more functions.

You don't need any more words - once you enter the battle, it will be absolutely insane. Cyber Hunter brings interesting concepts with what they call "vertical battle". This Battle Royale endowed with parkour and open world elements is undoubtedly one of the most risky and interesting products that you should try.
